This publication attempts to bring together a bibliography of some representative psychosocial works which relate to the field of human rights. It has been, and continues to be the belief of the New Brunswick Human Rights Commission, that research, education and conciliation are the essential ingredients for the policy of a human rights agency. The Commission has supported and continues to encourage those who are interested in research in human relations and studying the many parameters of human rights. It is the hope of the Commission, that this present publication will be of assistance and resource value to the student of human rights.
